(Specifi to The Farmer.)
Hartford, July 29—Before the Public Utilities Commission yesterday officials of the Connecticut Co. objected to order of the Bridgeport Common Council to extend the conduit for its current feed wifes from Pembroke street 700 feet easterly under Yellow Mill pond. J. J. Howard, electrical engineer for the company, said the expense of laying the duct from Stratford avenue bridge to Pembroke street, a plan already agreed on, would be $33,000.

He said it would cost $15,000 more to extend the ducts from Rembroke street under the Yellow Mill bridge He said that with the expense the company has been put to for the con-struction of the new Stratford avenue bridge would total nearly $200,000.

Mayor Chifford B. Wilson explained that the feed wires of the company are now carried overhead from the power house in Seaview avenue to Stratford avenue and over the Stratford avenue bridge. The mayor said the Common Council thought the wires should be underground from the east bank of Yellow Mill pond through Stratford avenue and under the river at the Stratford avenue bridge. The commission reserved its
